

Listening Exercise Worksheet 4

Passage 4 Listen to the passage and answer the questions below

My name is Sarah, a 20-year-old undergraduate currently pursuing my degree in Toronto. My current academic schedule comprises Biology, Spanish, and World History—the latter presenting the greatest obstacle owing to the overwhelming volume of chronological data required for assessments.

Fortunately, the faculty members are exceptionally supportive, routinely offering academic consultation outside regular lecture hours. I reside in a shared apartment on King Street, conveniently situated within a ten-minute walk of the central library campus. I live alongside two fellow undergraduates, Emma and Chloe, with whom I collaborate academically in our kitchen during the week. To maintain a healthy work-life balance, we routinely go jogging in a surrounding park on Saturday mornings.

My elder sister, Maya, is employed as a graphic designer in Vancouver; although her professional commitments severely restrict her travel frequency, her occasional visits are always accompanied by freshly baked chocolate chip cookies—a gesture I deeply appreciate given how much I miss her presence.

1. Which factor contributes most to the academic difficulty Sarah experiences in World History?
 - a) The lack of available consultation hours offered by faculty members.
 - b) The heavy reliance on memorizing extensive chronological data.
 - c) The strict attendance policies enforced during morning lectures.
 - d) The continuous collaboration required for group assignments.
2. What does the text indicate regarding Sarah's residential situation?
 - a) She commutes long distances daily from the outer suburbs of Toronto.
 - b) She inhabits a property with two peers within close proximity to academic facilities.
 - c) She manages a full house while hosting visiting family members from Vancouver.
 - d) She shares a studio space exclusively reserved for graphic design students.
3. How do Sarah and her housemates manage their personal wellbeing alongside their studies?
 - a) By organizing structured weekday study sessions in the central library.
 - b) By engaging in regular outdoor physical activity on weekends.
 - c) By scheduling weekly travel trips across different Canadian cities.
 - d) By limiting their academic discussions strictly to lecture halls.
4. What underlying sentiment is conveyed regarding Maya's visits?
 - a) Her rare visits are meaningful gestures of care despite her professional constraints.
 - b) Her unexpected arrivals disrupt Sarah's rigorous academic schedule.
 - c) She visits Toronto primarily to escape her demanding job in Vancouver.
 - d) She prioritizes her career over maintaining communication with her sister.
5. What attitude do the university faculty demonstrate toward student learning?
 - a) They expect independent mastery without providing external resources.
 - b) They maintain accessible consultation periods to facilitate student comprehension.
 - c) They adjust course curriculums based on student living arrangements.
 - d) They encourage students to focus primarily on practical field research.
